As a Partner of RiskLink, Michael assists corporate clients in the identification, assessment and control of their strategic business risks, with the aim of reducing losses and insurance costs, as well as maximising business improvement. Michael specifically provides risk services in corporate governance risk, business continuity, environment safety and health, human resources, public safety and liability, property and security risk management, emergency management, and product liability risk areas.

Michael started his career with the Australian Department of Defence, serving for nearly ten years with the Australian Army in various health, medical and safety specialist roles. A significant period of this service was in a specialist role as a member of the special forces Special Air Service (SAS) Regiment, serving in Australia and overseas environments, including experience with the US Army Special Forces safety and medical units.

Following military service, Michael worked as a safety and risk manager for an international mining company, operating both underground and open-cut mines and processing operations. He then joined the government public health department as regional safety and health manager for fifteen regional hospitals and related medical and health services.

In 1995, Michael joined the global insurance and risk services company Marsh Pty Ltd as a senior consultant providing safety and health, public liability, human resources, and security risk management services to large organisations in mining and construction, oil and gas, health and human services, pharmaceutical, transport, retail and manufacturing industries.

In 1999, Michael joined the global pharmaceutical company Pharmacia (now Pfizer) in a senior management role, overseeing human resources for WA and environment safety & health, and emergency & security risk management for their Australian operations, including the provision of some of these services to other Pharmacia and third-party manufacturer facilities in the Asia-Pacific area.

In 2003, Michael was one of the founding partners of RiskLink Australia, and continues in this capacity to this date. RiskLink has been associated with Equal Group since 2003.
